THE YPSILANTIAN, Ypsilanti, Mich

A PLEASANT DAY.—Thursday morning merry party consisting of Mrs. Myron Cady, her son Walter, and Misses Adella Cady, Abbie, Eva and Hattie Webb, made a visit to Mrs. Geo. Miller. A rollicking day was put in at this delightful home. Bare-back riding, hammock swinging and some fancy riding by Miss H. Webb, ending with a double turn over the picket fence into the ice cream freezer, completed the afternoon sport. It is thought Miss | The eyes are closed, and the features are Webb sustained no serious injuries as the gay tones of her voice joined with the onorous notes of the party, vied with the screech-owl, in disturbing the midnight slumbers of the neighboring farmers.

COLORED CAMPMEETING.—A couple of African evangelists have leased Starkweather's grove for a campmeeting, which is expected to open the last of the week. There is an impression that this camp meeting is not all wool and a yard wide Mr. Jeffries, who is the pastor here, and also the Presiding Elder of this district, embracing Detroit, Ann Arbor, Pontiac, Flint and Saginaw, is not consulted, and knows nothing about it. It seems strange that arrangements should be made for a campmeeting of colored people here, without the coöperation or the knowledge of Mr. Jeffries, whose congregation includes substantially all of the colored people

GREETING.—It seems natural enough to ee our old friend and townsman, Mr. Wm. B. Martin, on our streets again. Mr. Martin was for many years in business in this city, and several years on our school board. Having naturally a benevolent spirit, and desiring to better his fortunes he, some years ago, struck tent and never pitched it again till he reached Standing Rock agency, where he ministered for several years to the physical wants of the Sioux Indians. He is now located in business, at Marian Park, Minn., half way be tween the rival cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul, and at the precise point where preëminence will, in the near future, collide. There is a project now to locate the new state Capitol at this point and Mr. M. crumbs of profit from such project. The ble impress upon him. While always a good looking man, the long years of his but on the contrary he seems to have resister, Mrs. Ancil Williams.

IMPROVEMENTS.—Loughridge and Wilcox are putting down a broad flag stone walk across the Adams street front of Chas King's lot, and across Wm. Clark's lot adjoining, a distance of about 14 rods. That laid across the fronts of Wm. B. Clark and Wm. Wortley, on Huron street, is being extended across the adjoining lot to Pearl street. Austin F. Burbank, on south Huron street, has lately had put down as handsome a flag walk as there is in town; and Philo Ferrier is also laying stone walk at his place on River street.

-Another considerable piece of flagging is that about the new savings bank building. The steps necessitated by the elevation on Congress street are an undesirable feature, but otherwise it is an exceptionally fine piece of walk.

Jas. Seeley is building an addition upon the rear of his brick house at the corner of Washington and Catharine streets, putting on a new roof, and a porch in front.

Panorama of the Crucifixion.

Jerusalam on the Day of the Crucifixion, s the name of a panorama, or cyclorama, on exhibition in Chicago, which it was our rare privilege to see a few weeks ago, and which every visitor to the city should visit. It is in the building formerly occupied by the Siege of Paris, opposite the Battle of Gettysburg. The work was executed in Europe, and has received the approval of numerous eminent clergymen here, not only for its artistic merit, but for its tender and delicate treatment. The view embraces the Holy City, and considerable reaches of country, extending eastward to the Mountains of Moab, beyond the Dead Sea. Upon the rocky plateau of Calvary stand in strong relief and startling distinctness, the three crosses, with the grief-stricken group about their bases. Near the top of the central cross upon which the Saviour is stretched, is nailed a white slate bearing Pilate's inscription in Latin, Greek and Hebrew, 'Jesus of Nazareth, King of the Jews." Upon his head is the crown of thorns at rest. Mary, the mother of Christ, leans upon John, the beloved disciple. The Magdalen stretches up her hands toward the sacred figure. Martha, Mary and Lazarus, of Bethany, Nicodemus, and Joseph of Arimathea, are among the mourners about the cross. The light of the sun is eclipsed, and an oppressive gloom rests upon the entire scene.

"The picture is beautiful," says a Chicago paper, "but far more beautiful in its reverence, its tenderness, and the sweetness its lesson teaches."

About 11 o'clock, tables were placed, and ice cream and cake served to the visitors, after which Prof. George was introduced as toastmaster, and Esq. Joslyn, Col. Bowen and Dr. Hueston successively summoned to respond to toasts. Mr. Joslyn spoke of "the organization," and said it was really a reorganization from a company ante-dating the war, in which he was a charter member. In number of organized companies and of men, he said Michigan ranks fifth among the states. Col. Rowen spoke of "the position of the company in the state troops," declaring that the Ypsilanti Light Guard had always held a high rank among the companies of the state, and had never, in all their encampments and public occasions, given cause of reproach to their city or themselves; and he strongly urged the claims of the company upon the regard and encouragement of the community. Dr. Hueston spoke of "the company as an organization for the benefit of its members as citizens," considering the great value of the discipline and drill to the individual as a member of community, and urging the importance of military exercise among the pupils and students of all of our schools. At 12 o'clock, the hall was cleared and those who felt so disposed indulged in a dance. A very neat and appropriate decoration was the letters Y L G, formed of white helmets arranged upon the wall at the rear of the stage, and below those, formed of blue fatigue caps, "H 4"-indicating the local and official designation of the organization. The reception was in all respects successful—the most so of any that has been held, and highly gratifying to all concerned.

A Visit to Ward's Science Establishment.

Twenty-five years ago, to the lover of curious and beautiful things, Ward's museum was one of the attractions of Rochester. To-day its place is supplied by the collections to be found in Sibley Hall-the Library and Museum building of Rochester University. Ward's Science Establishment has become, what a placard at the door announces, a working institution where those who have no business are not expected to interfere with the time of the former employer of E. R. E. Cowell, has employes. Nevertheless to the visitor in been visiting Mr. C., here. He is a cousin coins. It bears the device of a log cabin search of information, to patrons, to all interested in science, the doors are open, and the utmost attention shown. Prof. Henry A. Ward is frequently away on collecting tours, securing material for the ever-diminishing, ever-increasing store; of specimens for which his establishment is so justly famous. At present he is exploring the waters around the peninsula of Lower California, a locality rich in forms of life that are very desirable and not easy to procure. During his absence his place is filled by Mr. Frank N. Ward, and to this gentlemen I was indebted for courteous guidance through the hive of unique industries which constitute the science establishment

Very few of the rooms convey, to the easual observer, much idea of the value or variety of their contents. In Cosmos Hall. however, the cases of drawers in which the great stores of material are contained, are surmounted by glass cases in which are displayed, in endless variety, sponges, sea-fans, corals and shells.

In the hall above are stuffed animalsoctopi with their hideous arms, turtles large and small, crabs with arms like the spokes of a wagon wheel, snakes, birds and quadrupeds-indications only of the stores of skins ready for mounting. Among the birds a group of eagles was noticeable; a magnificent white swan; a horn-bill with the bill almost as large as the bird; a sec retary bird with his pen over his ear; a rosy-colored flamingo, and herons of beautiful plumage. Among the mammals were representative forms of tropical and temperate climes from the duck-billed platypus of Australia to the buffalo of the west ern plains. The latter individual, though said to be an unusually fine specimen of the race now so nearly extinct, did not meet my expectations. In fact the mighty monarch of the plains is neither impressive nor awe-inspiring. In popular pictures the head is lowered as if for attack, but such seems to be the normal position. The bushy shoulders are as much exaggerated as the bristling mane of the traditional lion. A faded and ragged tuft of hair beneath the jaw gives a slovenly look to the countenance, the legs are not graceful, the hoofs are small, and to the thin hind quarters is appended an insignificant rope of a.

Passing to another room we found ourlection that would delight the heart of an anatomist. These are exhibited in glass cases, but I had only to ask for any mineral, and the spring of a drawer displayed scores of specimens from which the most fastidious could choose and be content. From the mineral room we passed to the collection of fossils, but the eve was weary with see ing and attention flagged. A hasty glance at some familiar form, a rapid survey of Smith organ, at W. R. INDUSTRIAL NOTES.

Steel Pens.

"Every year the citizens of the United States wear out about 130,000,-000 steel pens," said a prominent manufacturer. "Twenty years ago most of the steel pens used in this country were imported. Now comparatively few are imported, and there are several factories in this country in which they are made in large quantities. At present the importation of foreign pens is mainly confined to the high-priced articles. It was first doubted that steel pens could be made in this country, but it was soon learned that the requisite skilled labor could be obtained for high wages, and the success of the pioneers led one manufacturer after another into the business, until now the field is pretty well occupied. Most of the work on these little instruments is done with the aid of very fine machinery worked by women and girls. The steel used is imported, because it is believed that the quality is more uniform than the American steel. This uniformity of quality is necessary, because of very delicate tempering required in the manufacture of the pens. That mysterious quality of steel which gives different colors is a quality that requires expert manipulation on the part of the workman who does the tempering. He must know the nature of the material with which he works, and that knowledge he must exercise a marriage. celerity and skill that seize upon the proper instant to fasten the steel at a

"First the steel is rolled into large sheets. These are cut into strips about three inches wide. These strips are annealed, that is, they are heated to a red heat and permitted to cool gradually, so that the brittleness is all removed and the steel is soft enough to be easily worked. Then the strips are again rolled to the required thickness. It is the quick eye for color and the quick hand that fastens it that constitute the skill to determine the temper color that appears is straw color. This ticity of the metal varies with the color, and is arrested at any point by instantly plunging in cold water. The processes of slitting, polishing, pointing, and finishing the pens are operations requiring dexterity, but by long practice the workmen and workwomen become very expert. There have been few changes of late years, and the process of manufacture is much the same as it was twenty years ago, and the prices are rather uniform, ranging me concerning this story from 25 cents to $4 per gross, according to the quality of finish. The boxes | dent in some surprise. sold generally contain a gross. The best now in the market are of American make. Writers who buy foreign pens at fancy prices find them f ar inferior in durability to the American article. Persons who write continuously will wear out a good steel pen in two days."

The spark is obtained by a small primary battery capable of doing about thirty hours' work without attention, and which can be renewed at a small cost. In start ing the engine the vaporizer is heated for a few minutes, after which the necessary heat is obtained from the exhaust products of combustion while on their way to the chimney. The cylinder is water-jacketed, the water being kept in circulation by a small pump. After it has once been started the engine works automatically, preparing its own source of power, heating its charge, cooling its cylinder, and supplying its own spark for ignition. The great point here is that only ordinary petroleum is used, which, moreover, is entirely consumed, leaving no residue whatever, the combustion being complete. The cost of working this engine, taking the oil at the present price, is stated to be a little more than a halfpenny per horse power per hour. The engine is simple in construction and is well adapted for use where steam is inadmissable and coalgas not obtainable. It has been thoroughly tried and proved in practical work before being brought out.-Londun Standard.

The women of the east would look aghast at the prospect of living alone in a sod house for six months, miles and she can get a good gurl in a minfrom the nearest neighbor. Yet experience proves that the "unprotected" is much safer out on the lonely prairie than she would be in New York City. I never heard nor read of a woman on a homestead receiving an insult at the hands of anybody. To be sure, they are always armed and know how to handle a pistol, but they rarely have a more deadly use for it than the killing of a jack-rabbit or a prairie-dog. Such women complain more of loneliness than of fear. For whatever charms olitude may have for the sage, it certainly has none for the fair sex, not even our hardy western representatives of it. Here is one of their ingenious ways of avoiding it. Two of them will hold their annual camp-meeting at the Laft-sing Fair Grounds, beginning on Aug. 15 and continuing until the 22d.

They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgment. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests, except those of the usurer and the sheriff. Prohibition Platform, 1888.

The prohibition party in national convention assembled, acknowledging Almighty God as the source of all government, does hereby declare:

4. For the immediate adolition of the internal revenue system, whereby our national government is deriving support from our greatest national vice.

THE Volksblatt, German democrat paper of Rochester, N. Y., deserts the Cleveland-free-trade party and comes out for Harrison and Morton and protection, declaring that "the economical policy of the President is pernicious to the country and its industries, and, above all, ruinous to the workingman of the North."

IT takes Senator Evarts quietly but effectively to put the extinguisher on falacious theories and false claims. In the recent debate in the Senate on the fisheries treaty, he took up the headland theory of Canada and showed the absurdity of their claims in a way that told. The New York Mail and Express sets it off as follows:

Mail and Express sets it off as follows:

If the United States should apply it, we should draw our first straight line from Grand Manan, off the southeast corner of Maine, to Provincetown on Cape Cod. Our second bay would be included in a line drawn from Cape Cod to Cape Hatteras, and our third would extend from Cape Hatteras, and our third would extend from Cape Hatteras, and our third would extend from a line drawn from the southern end of Florida to Port Isabel in Texas. This would give us a pretty comfortable jurisdiction over the high seas and carry us very near to the Spanish dominions in the West Indies. There is no better illustration of the absurdity of the Canadian claim than this, and, as Mr. Evarts is undoubtedly the best international lawyer in the Senate, it may be taken for granted that he completely demolished the absurd theory which Mr. Bayard has adopted in negotiating his treaty with the Canadians.

"To go south tortionate demands of foreign monopolies | reason or rather contrary to reason. Nor does it matter whether trade, which was the spirit and point of many a poor boy paid his way through home competition is destroyed by fire or every democrat speech in Congress on the college from the generous wages received by free trade. One is just as bad as the Mills bill. It is certainly without reason, from southern planters. While the teachother, and he who thinks differently, has for no man who has carefully watched the ers were well used and well paid, yet they read our history to no profit.

As the names of most of them are familiar to our readers, and their efficient to introduce them. It is sufficient to say that they have been faithful servants of the state and merit the hearty support of the voters of Michigan. Two new names appear on the ticket. Stephen V. R. Trowbridge of Ionia, is a young man of fine presence and with a successful professional practice. He is a clear and consecutive thinker, and a forcible and convincing speaker, and if chosen to the position to which he aspires will honor the state and conscienciously care for its interests. Perry F. Powers is also a young man in the sense which custom allows us to speak Really, he is in the prime of life, young enough to reflect the spirit of his times. and old enough to bring to the State Board of Education, maturity of judgment and wise counsel. It is well we think to enlist into the service of our schools some thing of the vigor and enthusiasm which a man of thirty is sure to bring. Many institutions in the state have died, or at least lingered out a sickly existence be cause of old age in the management, but with Prof. Estabrook, venerable in years as in good works, for counsel, Ballou, for keen business insight and methodical habactive pertinacity, and Powers, for rare versatility and close scrutiny of facts and events, and all for broad views and generous impulses toward one of the most vital desirable and promising a combination of qualities as could be desired.

and will receive the endorsement of the people in November.

IN A BAD WAY. The making of tin plate had just begun in this country, under the tariff, and was profitable, when suddenly boron was discovered in large quantities. A tax of five cents a pound was immediately put or borax, to encourage this production, and in consequence of this the tin plate manufacturers could not compete with the foreign article. They resort ed to arsenic as a cheap substitute for borax, and after poisoning a few people gave up the job, and the foreign manufacturers of tin plate are thus protected by our tariff against competition in our own markets. Protection is one of the rules that works both ways, if not very carefully handled.—Sentinel.

From the above, it will be seen that the Sentinel has the free trade jim jams worse than ever. This will be only too evident to our readers when we call attention to the fact-unless Wagner and Crooks, recognized authorities on chemical technology, are ignoramuses—that borax is not But the administration of President Cleve used, at all, in the manufacture of tin plate, and, also, that arsenic is in no way whatever, similar to borax in its properties Furthermore, nobody with a grain of sense would think of using it as a substitute. But this is not all. From 1862 to 1871 crude borax was under a duty of 5 cents per pound and according to the Treasury department, sold in foreign markets at an average of 14.7 cents per pound for that period. For the three following years, it was duty free, and sold in the same market at an average of 18.8 cents per pound, so we see, the tariff taken off was simply as was the case with coffee, added to the foreign price to enrich the foreigner while it cost the consumer the same as before. So much for crude borax. Refined borax as under constant duty of 10 cents per pound from 1862 to 1883 when it was reduced, instead of advanced, to 5 cents. With these facts accessible to the Sentinel, he still has the gall to say he "doesn't write for leatherheads." Well, if he doesn't write for leatherheads, he certainly writes with one, and after such a leathery deliverance as we have quoted, he better sit down in the shadow of his ears, and rest.

The truth when told about tin plate, is simply this, that the ridiculous revenue tariff on tin plate of one cent per pound, prevents home manufacture, and gives a foreign monopoly the control over our markets and about 200 per cent. profit, on what they sell us. That is the sum and substance of the whole business, and is an outrage on home industries and the consumer alike. In the light of these facts, any man who knowingly attributes the non-production of tin plate to the duty on borax or to arsenic, shows that he has large vacant rooms in the upper story.

A DEMAND FOR REASON WHERE NO REASON IS.

The democrats are depicted as American rebels rying to ruin American labor, and the laborers upon whom they depend for votes, in order to aggrandise England and promote English interests, without a solitary reason offered why they should wish to destroy themselves for the benefit of Engishmen.—Harper's Weekly. The fact is, no good reason can be offered why the democrats wish to destroy the interests of labor. That is just why they are so unreasonable, but the facts exist, nevertheless, and the workingmen are coming to realize it more and more every day. Possibly, Mr. Curtis thinks some reason should be offered why he destroyed very hungry, and as you may well believe tion in this country has upon the foreign nite principle; a party without any distinct advance in right ways of thinking, truly unsilvered plate glass had fallen since 1875 to the country; a party which fell from fa- born southern ladies before the war, would 66% per cent. BLAINE'S GOT BACK.

After an absence from his country, of fourteen months, Mr. Blaine and family arrived in New York harbor, June 10th, at 11 a.m. To many who had come from far to welcome the great commoner home, it was a great disappointment that his arrival was delayed beyond the time for their departure from the city, but enough remained for an ovation such as no other man ever received, crowned or uncrowned. It may seem strange to some that Mr. Blaine has such a hold on the American when we remember his valiant service in the dark days of the republic, and that he is a true American in all his instincts, and is the most distinguished champion in our country, of a distinctively American policy that he is ever ready to lift his voice in defense of our fishermen on the coasts of Labrador, or the people on the Pacific slope, who are struggling to resist the hordes of corrupl and sunken humanity which would pour in upon them, that he stands in defense of the Monroe docits of work, Babcock, for legal acumen and trine, believing that America is for Americans both native and naturalized, that he believes in a restored merchant marine as the foundation of our naval power, that he advocates closer relations with the South and important factors in the educational American Republics as our natural allies, system of the state, we have presented as in fine, that he stands square and fair on every issue in which his country is interested, and brings to their advocacy transcend-The ticket in every part is a strong one antability and the most enlightened statesmanship, with all these things in mind, there need be no longer any mystery about what our eyes see, and our ears hear. Welcome home, James G. Blaine, thrice welcome to and warm hearts to greet thee.

> Copies of the Fort Dodge Times, a large and prosperous paper in its twentieth year published in one of the flourishing cities of Iowa, have been received at this office. The issue of July 5, 1888, has a column editorial, headed, Halt! About Face! It states that eighteen years ago the writer took charge of that paper, and has eve since consistently and faithfully supported the democrat party, and demonstrated his faith in it by deeds as well as words land and the declarations of the St. Louis convention are more than he can endure and he hoists the names of Harrison and Morton and declares his support of the epublican party. In his indictment of the administration policy he says of President Cleveland, "He risks the welfare of the country and his party on the cast of single die, a theory practiced by but a single nation on earth, a nation diametrically opposite to ours in position, being com pelled to draw upon the four quarters of the earth for raw material, while we have abundance at hand." Concluding, he says We leave a victorious party, entrenched in power, and controlling the patronage of the nation and of Webster county, and join a party that has not a dollar of public patronage to bestow.
> The democratic party bears the prestige of success, so enticing to cowards and camp-followers; but we choose to suffer the pangs of temporary defeat with the loyal legions of unquestionable patriotism, rather than share the tainted success of "the lost cause," indifferently concealed in the folds of a red bandana.

Some weeks ago, the Sentinel, in highly wrought language of oriental symbolism, referred to The Ypsilantian as Issachar rouching between two burdens, Ignorance on one side, and Conceit on the other. So far as Issachar is concerned, the point was very evident. Issachar was a powerful tribe (one of the six which were to stand on Mount Gerizim, the Mount of Blessing), which in due time crossed over into the promised land and occupied the valley of Esdraelon, the most fertile country in all Caanan. The tribe was noted for enterprise and industrious habits, and is mentioned in Judges, with honor for its brave and wise patriotism. In Chronicles, we read the following language: "And of the children of Issachar, which were men that had understanding of the times, to know what Israel ought to do," etc. Certainly, The Ypsilantian will find no fault with the Sentinel so far. What has troubled us, though, is to decide which one of our flanking contemporaries, he intends should stand for Ignorance and which one for Conceit. Our neighbor's recent articles on the tariff, auggest that with propriety, the Sentinel might stand for both. We see no necessity for involving our neighbor of the Commercial in the interpretation of his figurative lan-

THE daughters of two distinguished southern Congressmen, Senator Colquitt of Georgia, and Representative Brecken himself to benefit a party which, a few ridge of Kentucky, are applicants, it is reyears before, he had described as "a party ported, for positions in the public schools of Washington. This certainly is a new departure for the south, and indicates an national policy which it dares to present encouraging. Such an impulse in high and now attempts to sneak back to power things have changed since then. It is duct like his, just after such a speech, and school methods with a view to apply it in tive, and it is to be hoped that the school there comes to mind a quick retort once had no great love for this fearless chamnue from the Capitol, at the same time redevelopment of our industries, and seen were not as a rule, admitted to social stand-

Such a thing as tion of the protective policy for the past teaching school did well enough for 25 years, can possibly assign any reason "northern mudsills," but was not to be why that policy should now be destroyed. It thought of for the old time aristocracy. Don't ask it, Mr. Curtis, accept the fact | Slavery made all work degrading, and so discharge of official duties for the past that the policy is fiercely attacked and was not only a curse to the slave but his two years is well known, we need not stop drop it in among the unsolved and un-lordly master as well. One of the benefit cent results of the war is seen in the intro duction of new ideas and new standards of estimating worth and character, and these ladies who seek the schools now in Washington are to be congratulated for the sanction they give to honorable employment, and the noble motive which underlies their action.

Somehow, we don't seem to hear so much about the "robber tariff," as we did a few weeks ago. What is the matter? Has a change come over the spirit of dem ocrat dreams? Have our brethren seen a great light? In short, is the democrat people as his reception indicated, but party beginning to hedge on the tariff issue? It looks like it. Their papers have everywhere become suddenly busy with the work of explaining that they are not in favor of free trade at all; nothing in fact, was ever farther from their thought indeed, they are pretty good protection robbers themselves. We hear that the President himself is about to issue a supplementary message, to correct the popular the other seems to have occasioned, and probably Mills and Morrison and Watterson will favor us with revised editions of their views with explanatory notes. Harper's Weekly has already issued a cartoon which is significant of the idea of hedging. Cleveland is represented standing behind a big hedge, and armed with a pair of hedge shears. The hedge is labeled 'Protection," and the man with the shears is snipping off such vigorous growths as the hedge produces. The picture is entitled, "The difference between trimming | First-Class Sugar Cured Hams a Specialty a hedge, and cutting it down." : The woolgrowers of Washtenaw county have realized the effect of that "trimming," already, the country which reaches out eager hands and no amount or species of hedging which Cleveland's supporters can now do will break its force.

A HOLY FESTIVAL.

LESSON VIII, THIRD QUARTER, IN-TERNATIONAL SERIES, AUG. 19.

Text of the Lesson, Lev. xxiii, 33-44. Commit Verses 41-43-Golden Text, Ps. cxviii, 15-Commentary by Rev. D. M.

[Condensed from Lesson Helper Quarterly, by permission of H. S. Hoffman, Philadelphia, publisher.]

This chapter may well be called "The Chapter of the Feasts of the Lord" or "The Chapter of Holy Convocations," the former expression beginning and ending the chapter, and found also in verses 4, 37, while the latter is found no less than eleven times in this are apt to think of this most weighty statement. It ought to cause us to give heed with all our powers as we remember that while other things pass away "the word of our God shall stand forever.'

Moses was simply the Lord's mouthpiece to he people and had only to say what the Lord

"The fifteenth day of the seventh month." It is for God to appoint the day, and for us to be obedient. It was on the first day of this month that they blew with the trumpets, and on the tenth day was the great anqual atonement of last week's lesson. The fiftieth year or year of jubilee was ushered in by the blowing of trumpets on the atonement (xxv, 9, 10).

a gathering unto, and in the name of the Holy One of Israel. He was their holiness, even as He is ours, and apart from Him there is no holiness 'No servile work." Nine times in this chapter are we told of no work, or no manner of work, or no servile work (vs. 3, 7, 8, 21, 25, 28, 31, 35, 36) in connection with these holy days. All true service ought to be joyful service, a glad thank offering to Him who speaks from off the mercy seat, who Himself is our mercy seat. All slavish work, or work done because we ought to do it, or must do it, should have no place in the service of such a Redeemer, "whose service is perfect

V. 36. "An offering made by fire unto the Lord." Twice in this verse, and five times elsewhere in the chapter do we find this expression (vs. 8, 13, 18, 25, 27). It was because of this offering by fire that there was to be no servile work but only joy in the Lord, with deep

38. "Beside the Lord." Israel ings, which ye give unto the Lord." Israel was required to give unto the Lord for his special worship and for their own great good, every seventh day in the whole year, besides these three annual seasons of from one to seven or more days, when everything ordinary had to be laid aside; they had also to give one-tenth of all their increase besides their special gifts and vows and free will in the lesson (verses 39-43 were touched upon in connection with verse 34) let us look at the feasts of the Lord in their reference to (R. V. feast days), new moons and Sabbath days are a shadow of things to come." (Col. ii, 16, 17.) That Christ our Passover has been sacrificed for us; and that we are to sincerity and truth, purging out all the old leaven of malice and wickedness. (I Cor. v, 7, 8.) He also tells us that Christ risen from the dead is the first fruits of them that sleep. (I Cor. xv, 20, 23.) Here then is the substance of the first three of the seven feasts; Christ the true passover, Christ the true unleavened bread, and Christ risen from the dead the true first fruits. Now the fourth of the seven feasts, in the third month, called the feast of weeks because it was just seven weeks or fifty days after the last feast, called also the feast of harvest or first fruits of wheat harvest, clearly points us to that which occurred fifty days after the resurrection of Christ, viz., the conversion of thousands of Jews when the spirit was poured out at Pentecost. But all the first fruits are not in yet, and the reaping at Pentecost was only a beginning. In James i, 18, writing to the twelve tribes of the dispersion, he speaks of the believers as "a kind of first fruits;" and in Rev. 14, 4, the 144,000 of the sealed ones of the seventh chapter are called "a first fruits unto God and to the Lamb;" then, in

Rev. xiv, 15, we have the great harvest or reaping time, after the fall of Babylon, which is opened up more fully in Rev. xvii, xviii; then in Rev. xix, xx, the marriage of the Lamb, the judgment of the pations, the binding of Satan, after which comes the thousand years when Israel, in their own land, shall, from the least to the greatest, know the Lord, for they shall as a nation have been converted by the appearing of the Son of Man in power and glory, accompa-nied by His saints (Zech. xii, xiii); and then shall the true feast of tabernacles be kept, when "the Lord shall be King over all the earth," and "those that are left of the nations shall go up from year to year to Jerusalem to worship the King, the Lord of Hosts, and to keep the feast of tabernacles. Zech. xiv, 9, 16, 17. These feasts of the Lord are Jewish feasts and carry us forward to the redemption of Israel as a na-

on friendly terms with his rural neighbors at Franklin, N. H., and at Marshfield, Mass. One of his Marshfield neighbors thus related his acquaintance with the great expounder: "I was out in my dooryard one morning before breakfast last summer, and saw a gentleman in my cowyard. He apoligized for his intrusion, as he termed it, by saying, 'I got out of my carriage, sir, to look at your barn cellar. I am taken with its plan and structure, and thought I might gain an idea that I might put in practice at home. My name is Webster of Marshfield. I am taking a look round among my neighbors to see if I can learn some thing about farming.' 'Oh, Mr. Webster! My name is Collamore. I am happy to see you, Mr. Webster; won't you walk in sir?' 'Not today, sir, if you will excuse me. But, Mr. Collamore, we are neighbors, not very far apart, and I should be happy to see you at my house, I am a farmer, in my way, which is not so good as that of my more experienced neighbors, but we may find something with which to while away a little time on my place. Come down, Mr. Collamore, and see me, and bring Mrs, Collamore and your neighborsplease to invite them-tackle up, and all of you come down some pleasant morning and spend the day."

So Mr. Collamore, his wife and neighbors went down. Mr. Webster led them all over his farm till they got an appetite for dinner. It was in that year when flour was so high. Mr. Webster attended to the wants of his guests at table, and then called upon the servant for a piece of bread, He took the bread, remarking in an old fashioned style; "I tell my woman that flour is so high we must not buy only a pillow bier of flour at a time, nowadays." The idea of this allusion to old fashioned times was to his guests very ludicrous, and was one of the incidents they alluded to when they spoke with each other of their visit to Marshfield,—Ben: Perley Poore in Boston Budget.

How Chocolate is Made, "Chocolate," said a confectioner, "is made from beans that grow in pods on the cacao tree. These trees are numer ous in the West Indies, and it is from there we get our supply. The beans are brought hither in the pod, and put through a regular manufacturing pro cess to produce the chocolate cakes that we use. The first operation is the breaking of the husks and separating them from the kernels by a blast of air. Then the beans are ground with sugar by re- Dathfor Dath volving granite grindstones. The stones are heated, and the oil contained in the bean makes the mass adhere and be-come a thick paste. This pulp is now partly dried and the air bubbles are squeezed out in a press, and it is transferred to the cooling tables. Here it is beaten and worked by hand to produce an even texture and a fine grain. it is placed in molds, a blast of cold air is turned on, and in a few moments the beautiful glossy tablets are finished. "The British government has recently directed that chocolate be served two or three times a week in their army and navy. In confectionery the Parisians exceed us in the number of preparations of chocolate. We use it in its natural flavor only, while they mix essences and other flavors with it, until there is no end to the combinations that they produce. In England much of the chocolate is adulterated. Some recent tests detected flour, starch, potato, lard, chalk, bran and old sea biscuit in specimens offered for sale."—New York Mail and Express.

In some experiments with ozone as a curative agent an English lady, so far advanced in consumption that her case appeared hopeless, has been treated with inhalation of this gas, with results described as marvelous. After a month's treatment the appetite was regained, the sleep calm and refreshing, and there was a very good prospect of recovery. The ozone was prepared by passing a stream of oxygen through the current of an induction coil, and was administered with atmospheric air in the proportion of one in five. The experimenter has reached the conclusion that the ozone treatment is specially applicable to all germ diseases.

Some of those about the caske think that the family wish not only to keep his remains sacred to his own family, but that they prefer also that the public shall remember him only as he was in life. The people of Washington, therefore, will remem ber him only as they saw him last in health save the few who witnessed the removal, and caught a glimpse of the wan face and emaciated hand as it fell limp and almost lifeless at his side when he was borne upon the stretcher to be taken to the Swatora for his

They came to St. Louis, and Sunday, April 6, Preal T was killed with chloroform by Maxwe I. A few days later the body was found in a trunk, but Maxwell had fled. Officers traced him to Aukland, New Zealand, where he was arrested. He was returned and locked up in St. Louis. The motive for the crime was shown in Maxwell having taken Preller's money, over $800, and a lot of his wearing apparel and personal effects; but the clinching testimony was that of John F. McCullough. a detective who, under the aame of Frank Dingfelder, had been imprisoned with Maxwell as a forger, and from him secured a confession of the crime.

Maxwell's defense was that the death of Preller was accidental. He sand he had administered the chloroform to operate on Preller for stricture. After early mass Saturday morning the church was closed for a time and when it was re-opened, those provided with tickets began to arrive. Those who had the invitations came early. The ceremony was to be conducted with military precision. The bell began to toll, the troops were drawn up in line, and a few minutes afterward the family arrived. A new trial was sought on the ground that a juror had expressed himself in favor of conviction before the trial. The motion was denied. An appeal to the supreme court resulted in affirmation of the lower court's judgment, though the detective episode was censured and one of the judges (Sherwood) dissented. Application was then made to Justice Miller of the United States supreme court for a new trial on error, which was granted, and the execution, which had been set for Aug. 26, 1887, indefinitely staid. Later the matter was dismissed by the supreme bench, holding there was nothing to show that Maxwell had not had a fair trial. Maxwell's attorneys then sought executive elemency, which was refused Thursday.

Bes des being lame, Perry was loney; for he had no brothers and sisters, and his mother had to go out to work. So he found the Summer days long and wearisome. Fortunately he had some alent for making little to s and trifles, which was an occupation, but often he was not well enough to work; and today he was mourning the loss of his only tool of importance, an old knife, that it had at last snapped in two. Perhaps this was why his eves were night searching for food, of which he found a scanty supply, stealing from the road—something that True Stevens so quick to detect something shining in had pulled out of his pocket with his handkerchief, as he went laughing along in his careless fashion, and had left it lying there, to be crunched by the first cart-wheel that passed. Perry reached for his crutches, and hobbled out to where this shining object lay; and his heart gave a bound of

of wood, at which he had been ineffectually hacking. The knife cut the pine wood as if it had been cheese, and in less than no time Perry had the hulk of a small schooner on the bench beside him.

The morning was gone before he knew it, and the bench was full of chips, while a fleet of little boats stood in trim array on the window-sill by the time Perry remembered that his dinner must be eaten. He thought he was alone as he uncovered the plate of cold meat and bread which his mother had left for him, and so would any one else have hought had that person looked in the neat and tidy place which was parlor, bedroom and kitchen all in one; but all the same, he was not alone. Majiltan, the Man Monke

The original of the character 'Jocko, the Brazilian ape," was Henry Leech, an Englishman, whose professional name was Otto Motti. His body was of the size of an ordinary man'sbut his legs were only a footlong, yet such was his agility that he could outrun, on all fours, a very fair runner. His skeleton is in Mme. Tussaud's exhibition in London. The Ravels afterward introduced the character in in their pantomimes, but it was left to Majilton to bring it to perfection. He had wonderful strength in his hands and could walk with his hands hanging under an ordinary floor joist, his whole weight depending upon the grip between his thumbs and their opposing fingers with perfect ease; and he occasionally astonished a braggart of the profession by walking on his hands on a slack rope, or on the hawser with which the circus was towed by a steamer. This singular faculty made him an expert climber and he would run up and down the interior of the circus and leap the rails of the tiers and run along them with an agility that no ape could excel. He fairly rolled with laughter when he told how he frightened the colored people on the Mississippi. On one occasion, when he leaped among them, chattering and grimacing, many jumped in their fright through the windows of the circus into the river and were rescued with difficulty. "For God's sake, stop this," said Spalding afterward, "or we'll have dead negroes to pay for." In 1854, while playing Charleston, he created almost a panic in the theatre. One of the scrub women was stationed in the third tier with a stuffed baby, and Majilton, in his Jocko act, snatched it from and, jumping to the side of the proscenium boxes, beat its head against the wood and then threw it on the stage and jumped on it, the woman yelling all the while and the audience in a terrible uproar of terror and indignation,

> The Land by the Peaceful Sea. ON BOARD STEAMER "SANTA ROSA," Aug. 4, 1888

After spending a good part of the summer in Southern California at the beautiful city of Pasadena, (the crown of the valley,) I gather my little effects into my grips, ready to say good bye to these scenes.

I look at the two beautiful houses just completed, which are much admired, and pronounced by many the most beautiful in California for the money they cost; I go out into my peach orchard to eat just a few more peaches, a place where I have had many a feast during the last six weeks; I look at the grounds in front of the houses now being laid out in a lawn where the pepper, the fir and palm trees mingled with rose and many other flowering bushes are to be. I think of the great amount of fruit I have enjoyed during my stay, of the pleasant church relations, and the acquaintances formed; I think of the almost everlasting sunshine, and of the cool nights, such as I never enjoyed before at this season; I gather all the memories and sights of the past into a bundle, and with hat on my head and grips in my hand, I say good bye, I am now going to the "girl I left behind me.'

Arrived at San Pedro at 11 a.m., ready to be transfered in smaller vessels out to sea three miles, where our vessel was lying at anchor in waiting, having arrived from San Diego on the way to San Francisco. This is a beautiful vessel 340 feet | the Farming Regions of the West, Southlong and 3000 tons capacity, built in 1883 by John Roach & Son of New York and Chester, Pa., and cost about a half million | tickets, rates, time of train, etc., and for deof dollars. We left with more than 400 passengers on board, and the only show or promise I had for a room was a bed on the floor, and thirty-six hours' ride ahead of me, but as luck would have it, I secured a berth. It is said "misery likes company." Well, I had plenty of company. If any of our folks at home have an idea that the boom has gone, and wiped out pretty much all of value on this coast, they are greatly mistaken. To illustrate, we arrived this morning, Aug. 5, at 5 a. m. at Port Harford, when was loaded on our vessel, train load after train load of barley, wheat, potatoes, beans and butter, and the Captain said they had enough to last four vessels with just such loads till the first of January next. Two weeks ago yesterday and to-day I spent with Mr. D. A. Scott at Ontario, and formerly of Ypsilanti. He owns a farm of 1100 acres near Beaumont, situated 3000 feet above the sea. He had 1200 acres of barley, cut two hundred tons when green for hay, and has 1400 sacks of 110 pounds each of very fine grain. Last year he sold for $1.15 per sack. So much for the soil, and there is worlds of it. As to buildings, in the city of Pasadena, located only eight miles from Los Angeles there are now buildings in process of construction to cost $600,000, and that does not take in any to cost less than $3000. Several other large blocks are talked of as certain to be built this season.

At Los Angeles there are $12,000,000 worth of buildings in process of erection, and such immense blocks would do honor even to New York or Chicago. This is a wonderful city, has 80,000 population, and has increased ten times in seven years. Los Angeles county, seven years ago, had an assessed valuation of $17,000,000, to-day has $107,000,000.

As to churches, they are simply marvel-As to churches, they are simply marvelous. I will mention one, the M. E. Church Mr. C. E. COOPER of Pasadena. One year and nine months ago it had 141 members and to-day, 740. They built a fine church, and when my wife and I were there last January, it was Stephenson Gallery not completed. Long before it was done they found it was too small, and the first of April last, they commenced to build a Tabernacle at a cost of $10,000, which will seat two thousand people. The growth of the Presbyterian church is even more marvelous in many ways. But I must close this already too long letter. Shall stop a short time in San Francisco, and reach home at an early day.

Hartford furnished none of the inspi ration for "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Mrs owe got that when she was living with her father on the banks of the Ohio, but the inspiration did not assert itself until years after, when she was living in Maine with her husband. Mrs. Stowe has said that the story of Tom's whipping and death was the first suggestion of the tale that she had, and that flashed itself upon her mind as she was sitting in church one Sunday. She went home, took her pen, and wrote this chapter. She read it to her children and some friends, and they shed the first of the many million tears that the reading of that chapter had caused to flow. So "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was written backward, so to speak, for Mrs. Stowe built the story on that chap-ter, which is very near the end of the book. It was first published as a serial in The National Era, in Washington, and ran that rather obscure abolition publication up to a great circulation. It has since been translated into more than seventy different languages, and has a teady sale even to this time.

Either through ignorance or misfortune Mrs. Stowe profited far less than she should have done by the enormous sale of this book. She has received more for the copyright of some of her other books than she ever got for "Uncle Tom," and she has never received a cent of royalty for the dramatizations, some of which have been very profitable. She would have been poor had her income been limited to that received from the sale of "Uncle Tom." Her other books have sold well, and she is reputed to have accumulated something like $100,000 from her works. A shrewd book publisher of Hartford told the writer that if Mrs. Stowe's rights in "Uncle Tom" had been properly protected she would have realized at least half a million dollars from that work.—New York Sun.

A Town in the Tyrol.

The people are pious; they are very fond of outward shows and ceremonies, and the men religiously observe the feast days, of which there are about two a On these days the women work harder than usual, while the men occupy themselves with playing cards and drinking wine. Very large quantities of wine are consumed by the peasants. Dr. Pircher is my authority for saying that many peasants who never drink a drop of water, and drink far too much wine, live to a good old age. They eat heartily and heavily; five meals a day are required to appease their appetites; at each meal moked meat, maize and black bread are The bread is baked four times a year, so it is generally stale and satisfy-ing. In speech the people are Germans, and they show no trace of the Italian blood and characteristics which are conspicuous in other parts of South Tyrol. It is probable, however, that the stock is very mixed, as the people of many nations have successively occupied this part of Europe.—London Correspondence.

Little drink should be allowed at meals to weaken the digestive fluids. These are the saliva, gastric juice and bile. Bile is not found in a healthy stomach; if it is ejected in vomiting, it shows that the action of the stomach is inverted. Knowledge of this would save many from swallowing emetics and cathartics to rid the stomach of bile.

Copious draughts of water should be taken between meals to furnish the stomach material necessary for the digestive fluids. Water drinking an hour before meals should constitute a habit from infancy to old age. Its quantity must be regulated by the condition of each person. Lean people usually drink very little and are large eaters, while fat persons are apt to eat little and drink much. If the order be changed, it will, in most cases, make the lean grow fat, August 20 and 21. One and one-third and the fat people will have the comfort of seeing their own shadows grow less. Mrs. E. G. Cook, M. D., in Demorest's.
